ALTHOUGH INTERIOR DESIGNERS

Diana Hall and Elizabeth Manchego created a 2,889-square-foot residence in a relaxing and soothing aesthetic, their workdays in Seaglass at Bonita Bay were anything but calm and cool. Since they were asked to design the interior of this sixth-floor Bonita Springs condominium before the rest of the high-rise building was completed, the team either walked upstairs or took an outside elevator. “As part of the install, we had to wear hard hats and ride the temporary elevator that went up the outside of the building with the construction team. This was before there was running water in the building!” Hall says. “It was a nerve-racking process. But we still had a wonderful time because we created the residence in a contemporary yet transitional design that we love.”

Selecting a cool palette of varying blues and whites inspired by the Seaglass name and the panoramic views of the sky, Gulf of Mexico and Estero Bay, the designers created an interior that would appeal to European customers who favor a contemporary home. “We brought an aesthetic that was simple and modern with clean lines, yet was warm and inviting,” Manchego says.

One of the project’s main challenges was to create immediate visual interest in the foyer leading to the living, dining and kitchen spaces. Since the large ceiling needed to be defined in a way that would catch the eye, the designers came up with a creative idea. “We designed floating squares that glow from behind which brings architectural detail into the space,” Hall says. “We wanted a dramatic, lobby-inspired feeling.”

A pair of brushed stainless-steel benches from Urbia sit below large panels of silver circular art set within floating silver frames to create a touch of architectural detail in the foyer. In the back of this expansive space, a trio of polished cones brings a sculptural texture through a sophisticated yet fun presentation.

The designers created a unique wine wall and serving bar in the dining room, where Eurofase's chandelier separates white light into a spectrum of color above a custom, silver laminate table and Vanguard's chairs styled in vegan leather.

The dining room presented yet another challenge as its niche and the chandelier were not centered. It was too late to move anything, so we kept drywall in the niche but closed off part of it. Then for symmetry, the custom silver laminate top dining room table and Eurofase crystal-polished chrome chandelier were centered. This served a dual purpose. "We wanted to display the wine collection as well as line up everything perfectly along the deep-gray wall while making sure the chandelier felt like it was floating in the room and not blocking the water views," Hall says.

With beautiful countertops, a matching waterfall edge island and backsplash that echo the movement of sand, the kitchen is organic and natural, dreamy and contemporary like an island in the Caribbean. Together, the recessed lighting and porcelain flooring make a seamless transition to the living areas to create a grand entertaining space.

In the living room, which was so long it had to be divided into two separate areas, the larger space is dominated by boxy white furnishings and a center square glass cocktail table with a floating glass shelf. A shag area rug offers pops of blue and gray which add texture and a retro feel to the sleekness of the white porcelain flooring. In the rear, a smaller area with oversized chairs is the perfect spot to relax and enjoy a glass of wine.

LEFT: A favorite gathering place, the contemporary kitchen delights with crisp, white cabinetry by Gulf Atlantic Design, stainless-steel appliances by Thermador and Urbia's chic counter stools with stainless-steel bases in an exploding cantilever style. "We envision the family spending a great deal of time socializing at the island," interior designer Diana Hall says.

A custom, white-lacquer floating console lines the wall in the living room. Elan's polished chrome chandelier styled with three LED bracelets of concentric sizes appears to dance above Sunpan's seating centered by Bernhardt's glass-topped cocktail table. "The blue painting, Rhapsody, matches the beauty of the outdoor views," interior designer Elizabeth Manchego says.

Designed to maximize space, the master bedroom is all about the drama with a custom headboard wall. It goes to the soffit with a custom sandbox for the bed. “We love the headboard because it creates interest and adds detail with the softness of the upholstered panels,” Hall says. Wall-to-wall mirrors on either side add to the open aura that flows through to the master bath wrapped in marbled porcelain to create spa-like comfort. The contemporary motif continues with the glitz of a chandelier glowing in rivets of cut glass.

“We were so happy with this residence when we completed the design,” Hall says. “Adding fresh architectural detail, we created a sleek contemporary home that is also transitional, soothing, warm and inviting.”

ABOVE: A custom, upholstered headboard wall provides a focal point in the master bedroom, where spa-blue painted bedside chests from Worlds Away are reminiscent of sea glass. “WAC Lighting’s “Corso” chandelier became the jewel of the room like a bracelet,” Manchego says.

ABOVE RIGHT: Inspired by sea urchins, metal sculptural discs from Global Views dot the wall of the hallway, where ocean hues that color Leftbank’s art pieces lead the eye through to the private spaces.
